Solid growth in visitor arrivals and tourism revenue, but seasonality remains key challenge

Europeans account for over 50% of total market

"Koh Pha-Ngan and Koh Tao are idyllic Southeast Asian island destinations. Koh Pha-Ngan is known for its iconic Full Moon Party while Koh Tao is a renowned diving destination. Both Koh Pha-Ngan and Koh Tao have experienced strong tourism growth since 2012. The two islands welcomed over 1.6 million visitors as of 2017 (latest data available), representing a double-digit five-year CAGR of 16% between 2013 through 2017.

Koh Pha-Ngan surpassed over one million visitors in 2017 for the first time, with a 11% y-o-y growth rate. The tourism market on the island is highly seasonal. Market-wide hotel occupancy often reaches 80% during high season and Full Moon Party periods, but is volatile at other times.

Ferries are the primary mode of transportation to these two islands, with the majority of visitors traveling from Koh Samui. Some visitors opt for Surat Thani as a transit point on the mainland.

Trends

- Seasonality is the main disruptor of the islands’ tourism with Koh Pha-Ngan’s focus on the Full Moon period and Koh Tao’s peak diving season from March to May.

- Key demand segmentation for both islands is composed of wholesale FITs (48%), OTAs (38%), direct bookings (12%), and wholesale groups (2%).

- The U.K., Germany and France are key international source markets for both Koh Pha-Ngan and Koh Tao, which account for more than 20% of total visitors.

Forward Outlook

- Bangkok Airways remains the primary airline operator to Koh Samui since September 2018 after Thai Airways discontinued their twice-daily flights.

- Among key international source markets for Koh Pha-Ngan, long-haul travelers from the U.S.A and Australia dropped by 6%, with the high cost of transportation being a barrier to entry.

- Except for the domestic and traditional European markets, emerging countries such as Israel, Russia, and Mainland China are making headway in becoming key feeders of island visitors.
